

Ghost

Brian Allan Skinner

These are no longer my tools, nor the wooden bench on which I fashioned planks of oak or birch into a table, a blanket chest, a cradle.

A household cast among cousins
like milkweed on the wind.
It is time to let them go.
These are no longer my hands.