

Cacao

Brian Allan Skinner

Dark as blood,
thick as night:
chocolate,
a luscious sin
even without the cherry.

Welling from below,
lava of the libido:
chocolate,
melting on my tongue,
sliding down my throat.

One drop escapes
from ecstatic lips:
chocolate,
a stain on satin sheets,
dark as blood.